

Kathie Larkin

"I've been a mom since I was 20. I feel that my greatest accomplishment is my kids, who are now 8, 15 and 18. As an actor, it feels great to be able to be myself and to talk about issues I care about deeply as a mother."

Kathie Larkin's acting resume includes roles on well respected TV programs, such as "In the Heat of the Night" and "Unsolved Mysteries" as well as several national commercials. Her acting career has taken her to New York City and now Atlanta, where she has branched off into narration, voice-over projects, fitness modeling, shoe modeling, and body-double modeling. As a working mother, Kathie credits the help of her own mother, who lives with Kathie and her family.

Her biggest role to date has been that of a mother. She was a 20-year-old married college student at Gannon University in Erie, Penn., in the mid-1980s when she learned she was pregnant. Two weeks after having her son, Joshua, Kathie returned to her full-time college studies. She earned a B.S. in Mental Health Counseling with an emphasis in Elementary Education in 1988. She soon began modeling and moved to New York City with her young family. Kathie eventually had two more children. She became heavily involved in fitness and nutrition after the birth of each of her children, amassing significant experience on the challenges and tips for keeping in shape during and after pregnancy.

Today, at age 38, Kathie considers herself to be in the best shape of her life and is currently getting certified to become a certified trainer through ACE. She appears as a guest host most weeks on the radio web show "Dr Fitness and the Fat Guy." Kathie volunteers in both of her daughters' classrooms and in church activities. Her son Joshua is now studying business management in college, while her daughters, Jordan Paige and Alexa, attend high school and elementary school.

Rayme Cornell

Rayme Cornell is the “super sexy single mom” of a “delicious” three year-old boy named Brick. Rayme currently lives in Las Vegas after 11 years living in Brooklyn, New York. Her life so far has been spent in the Arts. She received her BA from University of Nevada Las Vegas and went on to complete her MFA at the University of Missouri Kansas City, in association with the Missouri Repertory Theatre, and from there was off to the Big Apple where she has been working ever since. Her life has been spent on numerous Regional Stages and in the sound booths of New York. Theatre is her first love and voice-overs her second. She is also a founding member and Associate Artistic Director of “Point of Entry Theatre”, P.O.E.T. which she started with her best friend of 20 years. Rayme is involved with several education outreach programs through P.O.E.T. including Lincoln Center’s “Meet the Artists” series, where she teaches performance workshops based on multicultural ensemble driven theatre that reflects our common humanity. Rayme also enjoys teaching privately, anything from voice for stage, movement and acting to producing voice-over CD’s for professional actors. Since becoming a mom, her most challenging and rewarding “role” of all has been in raising her son, so this unique and educational experience has come at the best time of her life where she not only has a voice to share her thoughts but can be a part of this most amazing community we call MOTHERHOOD!

Melissa Cooper

Melissa Cooper, 30 year-old savvy mom, has led a truly dynamic life. By incorporating motherhood with graduate studies and a career as a professional educator, she has become the epitome of feminine strength. Melissa has been a teacher of history and sociology for the past eight years and is focusing on early African American history in her graduate studies at Rutgers University. She has drawn valued and irreplaceable support from her loving husband and two sons, ages four and three months. Melissa strives to affect social change in her New Jersey neighborhood and in the greater national community. Her commitment to the personal advancement of her students is only surpassed by her dedication to her family. The very serious work ethic that has propelled her in life can solely be credited to her caring and nurturing parents and their southern roots and traditions. Melissa takes pride in her accomplishments and hopes to continue to act as an ambassador for motherhood.
