

A New Point of View

As a wildlife cameraman for more than 20 years, Gordon Buchanan has traveled the world, trying to capture nature's most intimate and dramatic moments. But wouldn't it be incredible to see the world from an animal's point of view? Buchanan and a team of pioneering animal behaviorists do just that — with the help of the animals themselves — in Animals With Cameras, A Nature Miniseries.

To journey into the animals' world, the animals are fitted with small, unobtrusive, custom-built cameras that can be easily removed. With this state-of-the-art technology, the animal cinematographers take viewers into places human cameramen simply can't go, expanding our understanding of their habitats and solving mysteries that have eluded scientists until now.

The first episode ventures to Southern Africa, where the collar-camera footage reveals newborn Kalahari meerkats belowground for the first time. Get a breathtaking birds-eye view of Magellanic penguins in Argentina hunting for food. Follow the treetop progress of an orphaned chimpanzee in Cameroon and witness new behaviors, including weaving, washing — and chimp selfies!

The second episode captures young cheetahs learning to hunt in Namibia, reveals how fur seals on an Australian island evade deadly great white sharks offshore, and helps solve a turf war between South African farmers and chacma baboons. The final episode takes a deep-dive with Chilean devil rays in the Azores, tracks brown bears' diets in Turkey, and reveals how a team of dogs protects flocks of sheep from gray wolves in Southern France.

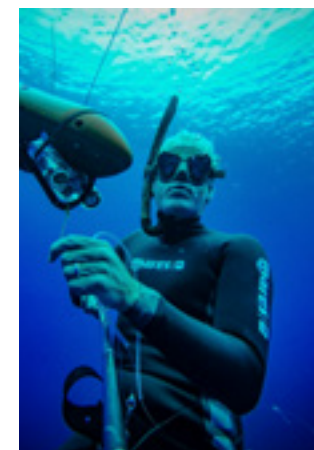

"The chance to capture elusive moments, like a penguin's underwater hunting habits or a meerkat family's sleeping rituals in their underground burrow, was an extraordinary experience I never thought I would be privy to," Buchanan said.

"Never before have we seen such high-quality footage directly from the animal's point of view," said Nature executive producer Fred Kaufman. "This miniseries greatly expands our comprehension of animal behavior, and this camera technology opens up new possibilities for discovering so much more."

ECO-SOLUTIONS FOR AN EVOLVING FUTURE

For New York City, Superstorm Sandy in 2012 was a costly wake-up call. Now, more than ever before, the city needs a way to protect its future and make it more resilient after extreme weather events.

Digital series NYC Rising takes a look at five different ways the city is fortifying itself for the future: from designing the new Whitney Museum from the ground up to protect it from extreme flooding, to a community group in Red Hook, Brooklyn preparing to be their own first line of defense during a disaster, to shielding Hunts Point, the largest food distribution center of its kind in the world. These solutions are helping people, communities, and institutions cope with a changing climate and could be a model for the nation.
